

Community Impact

For nearly 150 years, the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra has been a treasured cultural institution, an education leader, and a musical ambassador for the region. The SLSO is committed to engaging with the community and making music accessible to all through live concerts, free events, music education, radio broadcasts, and digital content.

During the 2025/26 season:

The new Jack C. Taylor Music Center opened, creating a welcoming, expanded home for music, education, and community gathering

225,000+ people experienced the SLSO live

250+ concerts, free events, and education programs were held

150+ community partners including universities, houses of worship, social service agencies, nonprofit organizations, and cultural institutions hosted SLSO concerts

200,000+ students and 1,000+ teachers engaged with SLSO education programs

420,000+ people experienced weekly radio broadcasts and digital streams by St. Louis Public Radio, Classic 107.3 FM, and Classical Kansas City

Community Day

The SLSO's Community Day welcomed all to our newly renovated home for a free celebration featuring more than a dozen performances by SLSO community partners, including Opera Theatre of Saint Louis, The Repertory Theater of St. Louis, the Black Rep, Saint Louis Dance Theatre, St. Louis Classical Guitar, and the St. Louis Children's Choirs.
